"Next Time, Mom"

Some time ago, on a Saturday morning, Mom was up early and started her house-cleaning routine, top to bottom, as she did every Saturday. Since I was visiting, I lent a hand. As I tried to steer clear of the vacuum, mop, laundry, etc., we did manage to get in a conversation or two, and visit.

As I set out to leave, I said goodbye to both parents with a wave and a holler and got in my car. Backing out of the driveway, mom came out and stood on the porch, broom in hand, and waved. I waved back and thought to stop and give her a hug.

Being much younger, and in my hurry to go, I said, "Next time, Mom." The glue that held us all together, passed away that same night. That "Next time, Mom," will be when we meet again.

If you still have your mom, give her a hug. No reason needed, She'll already know. I love you, Mom!

Weird Animal Facts

- The mother who gives birth to the largest baby on Earth is an elephant. She is pregnant for 22 months and gives birth to a blind 200lb calf! Mercy!
- An orangutan mother never puts her babies down and typically nurses them for 6 or 7 years, which is the longest mother/child nursing dependence of any animal on Earth. Even after the "baby" moves out on its own, a female orangutan will often "visit" her mother until she reaches the age of 15 or 16!
